Laces and other airy-looking materials are much in evidence, and a pleasing effect is produced by having the gold and tinsel trimmings toned down to some extent by showing through the lace.

Everything on the L'Aiglon order continues to be popular, and there are several other last season's shapes which have again been brought out, but the general tendency is to lower hats, and nearly all of the newest shapes are flat. Pleated chiffons, mousselines and silks are in high favor. Crimped mull, velour, "in the Edelweiss" pleat, and pongee plisse are all used with good effect. Fruits of all kinds are again employed this season in trimming, and the harge amount of gold trimming that is used necessitates the use of gold-wire frames.
